

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

THOMAS BRANAGAN,
Plaintiff,
v.
JOSEPH WALL, et al.,
Defendants

Case No. 3:17-CV-0485-MMD-CLB

ORDER

Before the court are defendants' motions for leave to file medical records under seal in support of defendants' motion for summary judgment. (ECF Nos. 38 & 45).

“Historically, courts have recognized a general right to inspect and copy public records and documents, including judicial records and documents.” See Kamakana v. City and County of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172, 1178 (9th Cir. 2006) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). “Throughout our history, the open courtroom has been a fundamental feature of the American judicial system. Basic principles have emerged to guide judicial discretion respecting public access to judicial proceedings. These principles apply as well to the determination of whether to permit access to information contained in court documents because court records often provide important, sometimes the only, bases or explanations for a court’s decision.” Oliner v. Kontrabecki, 745 F.3d 1024, 1025 (9th Cir. 2014) (quoting Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. v. F.T.C., 710 F.2d 1165, 1177 (6th Cir. 1983)).

Documents that have been traditionally kept secret, including grand jury transcripts and warrant materials in a pre-indictment investigation, come within an exception to the general right of public access. See Kamakana, 447 F.3d at 1178. Otherwise, “a strong presumption in favor of access is the starting point.” Id. (internal quotation marks and

1 citation omitted). “The presumption of access is ‘based on the need for federal courts,
 2 although independent—indeed, particularly because they are independent—to have a
 3 measure of accountability and for the public to have confidence in the administration of 4 justice.’” Center for Auto Safety v. Chrysler Group, LLC, 809 F.3d 1092, 1096 (9th Cir.
 5 2016), cert. denied, 137 S.Ct. 38 (Oct. 3, 2016) (quoting United States v. Amodeo
 6 (Amodeo II), 71 F.3d 1044, 1048 (2nd Cir. 1995); Valley Broad Co. v. U.S. Dist. Court-D.
 7 Nev., 798 F.2d 1289, 1294 (9th Cir. 1986)).

8 There are two possible standards a party must address when it seeks to file a
 9 document under seal: the compelling reasons standard or the good cause standard. See
 10 Center for Auto Safety, 809 F.3d at 1096-97. Under the compelling reasons standard, “a
 11 court may seal records only when it finds ‘a compelling reason and articulate[s] the factual
 12 basis for its ruling, without relying on hypothesis or conjecture.’” Id. (quoting Kamakana,
 13 447 F.3d at 1179). “The court must then ‘conscientiously balance[ ] the competing
 14 interests of the public and the party who seeks to keep certain judicial records secret.’” Id.
 15 “What constitutes a ‘compelling reason’ is ‘best left to the sound discretion of the trial
 16 court.’” Id. (quoting Nixon v. Warner Comm., Inc., 435 U.S. 589, 599 (1978)). “Examples
 17 include when a court record might be used to ‘gratify private spite or promote public
 18 scandal,’ to circulate ‘libelous’ statements, or ‘as sources of business information that 19 might harm a litigant’s competitive standing.’” Id. (quoting Nixon, 435 U.S. at 598-99).

20 Center for Auto Safety described the good cause standard, on the other hand, as 21 the exception to public access that had been applied to “sealed materials attached to a 22 discovery motion unrelated to the merits of a case.” Id. (citing Phillips ex rel. Estates of 23 Byrd v. Gen. Motors Corp., 307 F.3d 1206, 1213-14 (9th Cir. 2002)). “The ‘good cause
 24 language comes from Rule 26(c)(1), which governs the issuance of protective orders in
 25 the discovery process: ‘The court may, for good cause, issue an order to protect a party
 26 or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense.’”
 27 Id. (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)).

28

1       The Ninth Circuit has clarified that the key in determining which standard to apply
2 in assessing a motion for leave to file a document under seal is whether the documents
3 proposed for sealing accompany a motion that is “more than tangentially related to the 4 merits of a case.” Center for Auto Safety, 809 F.3d at 1101. If that is the case, the
5 compelling reasons standard is applied. If not, the good cause standard is applied.

6       Here, defendants seek to file exhibits under seal in connection with their motion
7 and reply in support of summary judgment (ECF Nos. 37 & 44) which is unquestionably
8 “more than tangentially related to the merits of a case.” Therefore, the compelling reasons
9 standard applies.

10       This court, and others within the Ninth Circuit, have recognized that the need to
11 protect medical privacy qualifies as a “compelling reason” for sealing records. See, e.g.,
12 San Ramon Regional Med. Ctr., Inc. v. Principal Life Ins. Co., 2011 WL89931, at *n.1
13 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 10, 2011); Abbey v. Hawaii Employers Mut. Ins. Co., 2010 WL4715793,
14 at * 1-2 (D. HI. Nov. 15, 2010); G. v. Hawaii, 2010 WL 267483, at *1-2 (D.HI. June 25, 15 2010); Wilkins v. Ahern, 2010 WL3755654 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2010); Lombardi v.
16 TriWest Healthcare Alliance Corp., 2009 WL 1212170, at * 1 (D.Ariz. May 4, 2009). This
17 is because a person’s medical records contain sensitive and private information about 18 their health. While a plaintiff puts certain aspects of his medical condition at issue when 19 he files an action alleging deliberate indifference to a serious medical need under the 20 Eighth Amendment, that does not mean that the entirety of his medical records filed in 21 connection with a motion (which frequently contain records that pertain to unrelated 22 medical information) need be unnecessarily broadcast to the public. In other words, the 23 plaintiff’s interest in keeping his sensitive health information confidential outweighs the 24 public’s need for direct access to the medical records.

25       Here, the referenced exhibits contain plaintiff’s sensitive health information,
26 medical history, and treatment records. Balancing the need for the public’s access to 27 information regarding plaintiff’s medical history, treatment, and condition against the need
28

1
2 to maintain the confidentiality of plaintiff's medical records weighs in favor of sealing these
3 exhibits. Therefore, defendants' motions to seal (ECF Nos. 38 & 45) are GRANTED.

4 IT IS SO ORDERED.

5 DATED: August 7, 2020.

6
7 UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE

8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28